

1. Mix them into your compost pile:

Toss them in your compost pile to give it an added boost of nitrogen.

2. Use them as plant food:

Coffee grounds are acidic, which makes them a great soil additive for blueberries, roses, hydrangeas, and other acid-loving plants.

3. Cook with coffee grounds:

Use coffee grounds as a meat rub or mix a bit into your next marinade concoction.

4. No more stinky hands:

Keep a container of coffee grounds by your kitchen sink and rub on smelly hands after cutting up onions, fish, or garlic.

5. Deodorize the fridge:

Place an open container of used coffee grounds in your fridge or freezer to eliminate odors.

6. Make a coffee scrub:

Simply mix the grounds with a bit of carrier oil (such as coconut oil or sweet almond oil) to create an impromptu body scrub.

7. Dye stuff:

The tannins found in coffee are lovely for dyeing fabric or paper. Try steeping the grounds in hot water to create a dye (or just use brewed coffee), or rub the grounds into the surface of fabric or paper.

8. Give your worms a buzz:

OK, not really... But worms do appreciate coffee grounds and they actually need gritty substances (such as coffee grounds) in their diet to aid in the digestive process.

9. Deter the creepy-crawlies:

Sprinkle coffee grounds in areas where you would like to repel ants, snails, or slugs.

10. Fill pin cushions:

Use dry coffee grounds as a filler for home-made pin cushions.
